From the Chaplain....

There is an old oak tree, just outside the office where I am sitting, with holes in it where starlings like to nest. Last spring when the school was quiet, I saw a starling making repeated trips out from the tree to find food and back to feed its young. As I write this, there is a group of starlings sitting in the tree and calling to each other in an amazing variety of squeaks, whistles and chattering noises. They are sociable birds who seem to like to natter as if encouraging one another as they look for food and good nesting materials. Later on they will fly about in perfect harmony, soaring and changing direction together to form spectacular ‘murmurations’ before suddenly swooping down to roost.

I suppose their ability to work together and create so beautiful a display is helped by their continuous communication but also by a constant awareness of one another. And there are plenty of examples in nature of even the tiniest creatures working together to achieve what might seem impossible. Think about the structures built by termites!

There are so many impossible-looking challenges facing us human beings as a species at the moment, aren't there? The climate crisis, ending all manner of injustice in the world, finding cures and treatments for all sorts of illnesses... On a more personal level it can sometimes seem challenging enough just to get to the end of our own job list for the day. I don't know about you, but I find the more I have to do, the busier I get, the less I notice the people around me. So how might we be inspired by the starlings to work together, to pay attention to one another and to achieve something amazing together?

Our reading this week can be summarised in just three short phrases: 'Love God. Love one another. The rest are just details.' I wonder if we can make time over the next week to look up from our busyness and really notice the people around us? I wonder if we can start to notice where God is and what he is doing in our conversations and our interactions this week? Be prepared to be amazed at what happens when we do start to pay more attention to God and to one another.

A new commandment. What is really important?

Words to remember this week:

“Love God.
Love others.
The rest are details.”

Jesus (Matthew 22:37-40)

Next Week's Theme for Worship

Mark 14: 12-31

The Last Supper

At The King's CE School we believe that everyone is unique and created in God's image. We enable all to achieve their God-given potential; to grow, learn and aspire; to transform their lives and the lives of others and to journey in faith without limits within a unified, respectful and harmonious community.
